JAPS PLAN TO BATTLE CALIFORNIA IN COURTS

State Department Is Surprised When Word Comes In

NO INTERFERENCE

Federal Government Decides To Keep Hands Off

CONFERENCES ON

Saghalien Question Is Discussed In Tokio And America

(U. S. Naval Radio)

New York, Sept. 23.—Preparations for a "friendly suit" to be instituted in the United States federal courts by the Japanese government in an attempt to block the threatened California anti-Japanese legislation, are reported from Tokio by a correspondent of the Associated Press.

It is said that the suit will be based on a question of the constitutionality of such a law as that which has been proposed for the approval of the California legislature. The bill is declared by the Japanese, according to the despatches, to be a violation of treaty rights.

U. S. SURPRISED

Washington, Sept. 23.—Reports that the Japanese cabinet has decided to request the appointment of a commission by the United States government to bring about a solution of the immigration and land problems on the Pacific Coast were received with surprise today by the American state department. The American department has been continuing its efforts to bring about a solution of the department by diplomatic means.

Conferences between representatives of Japan and of the State Department are continuing here while similar meetings are being held in Tokio between Mr. Morris, the American Ambassador, and representatives of the Japanese government. These discussions are said to include the Saghalien question as well as that of the California situation.

WILL NOT INTERFERE

It has been clearly shown that the state department does not intend to attempt to interfere in the California legislative situation.

Rumor has it that if the anti-Japanese legislation is adopted by the California lawmakers and a misunderstanding results there are two likely methods of reaching a solution.

One is that a treaty might be signed by the two nations, modifying the action of the state.

The other is that an action at law might be started in the American federal courts.

There has been no indication that a treaty has been seriously contemplated by the state department and it is understood that the matter of a court action has not been brought up at any of the conferences.

NEW ANTI-JAP LEAGUE

San Francisco, Sept. 23.—Thirty powerful organisations in California have united in a new Japanese Exclusion League.

A movement to stop the settlement of undesirable aliens not only in the Pacific Coast states but in the Southwestern states as well has been set on foot. It has been decided by the new league to take up the matter of co-operation in the movement with the League of the Southwest. It is the proposal that the legislatures in the states interested pass laws to prevent the holding of land by undesirables.

Socialists Again Expelled From Legislative Body

Albany, N. Y., September 22.—Three out of the five Socialists who were expelled from the New York State Legislature on charges of disloyalty and were recently re-elected, have again been expelled. The remaining two resigned their seats.

American To Be Given British Medal Today For Heroism At Sea

Sailor Who Rescued Imperiled Captain When Mine Sweeper Was Sunk Is To Be Presented With Decoration

Chief Carpenter's Mate Douglas Crossley—attached to the American destroyer Elliott—is an American gob, a California boy, and this morning at 10 he is to be the central figure of a ceremony at the British Consulate, and this because of a thing he did on a British boat in the North Sea while the war was being fought. By order of King George Chief Carpenter's Mate Crossley is to receive the British Distinguished Service Medal from the hands of Sir Everard Fraser British Consul-General.

Crossley went to war from Shanghai about the time it started, having then served some fourteen years in the American Navy. He was on the American transport Titagaru that had been the German passenger ship Camelia Rickman when it was torpedoed in the Bay of Biscay on January 18, 1918, and when most of the 1,800 American cavalrymen it was carrying to France lost their lives. It was after he had recovered from the ordeal of fourteen days in an open boat, which saved him when the Titagaru went down, that he was assigned to service, with four other American sailors, on the British mine sweeper Girl Kathreen in the North Sea.

ON THE GIRL KATHREEN

The Girl Kathreen was commanded by Sub-Lieutenant Stephens and on a June morning when the vessel was at work at a point between Brest and Dover Commander Stephens summoned Crossley into the bow to discuss a question of the adjustment of the apparatus carried there to gather in the floating mines.

A steel cable, part of the equipment called a perivane, had been pulled in to the deck of the vessel when the legs of the commander suddenly were caught and imprisoned in a mesh cable that began to tighten.

Almost at the same instant both the commander and the sailor saw an object floating in the sea immediately ahead of the vessel. It was a thing familiar to both, a mine, and they saw that instead of engaging the sweeping apparatus that it was dead forward in a position where inevitably it would be struck by the prow of the ship. It was a matter of seconds only.

It is related that Crossley stayed with his commander in the face of the peril, but he was not idle. With seconds only in which to work he seized a axe and he succeeded in cutting the officer free. Commander Stephens' legs had been broken, in fact they had almost been severed, so he was helpless, but Crossley, knowing the explosion that would wreck the ship beneath him was upon them, picked him up and had started aft when the blast came and both were hurled into the sea.

TAKEN ON RAFT

They tell that after Crossley had swum to an already overloaded life raft after the ship had sunk he insisted that they take the injured commander aboard, saying at the same time that he would shift for himself, and then the survivors on the raft refused to let him sacrifice himself and with the commander they also took him aboard. The raft then carried nine passengers and they were together four days before they were picked up. Commander Stephens lost both of his legs, but his life was saved.

Crossley recovered from this experience and lived to go through a somewhat similar experience on another British ship the Irish Lass, another mine sweeper which struck a mine on December 18 of the same year and sank almost immediately off the coast of Norway. He was one of the five survivors from this disaster.

ANOTHER MEDAL

When the war ended after seeing some little service in the Archangel district of northern Russia Crossley went back to America and about five months ago he was the leading character in a ceremony, something like that to take place this morning, when the American Medal for Valor was conferred upon him at Washington for services he had performed in connection with railroad work in northern Russia.

Crossley is 37 years old and as he began service in the American Navy when he was 14 years old, with a few lapses into civilian life, he has seen 18 full years of service in the navy and has played a part in every important engagement in which the American Navy has figured since 1898, beginning with service with Dewey's fleet at Manila. He has re-enlisted five times.

From shipmates who know him and from others one is able to learn that Crossley has been pretty well over the whole place, particularly where things have been stirring, but however unwilling he has been to tell about his career, it may be added that the Distinguished Service Medal he will receive this morning will be the tenth award he has received.

He will be accompanied this morning at the British Consulate by Mr. S. T. Wright of the American Consulate and three officers from the British gunboat Teal.

Hope For Settlement Of Strike Situation Is Seen After Conference

London, Sept. 22.—The fateful meeting of the Triple Alliance, attended by about 500 delegates assembled in London today to discuss the threatened coal strike, and late this afternoon an official statement was issued to the effect that the Congress had decided to send a deputation to Mr. Lloyd George to urge acceptance by the Government of the miners claims.

The Congress is remaining in session in order to receive the report of the result of the conference. Mr. Lloyd George has agreed to meet the deputation.

NO SETTLEMENT

Later.—The Triple Alliance deputation had a three and a half hours conference with Mr. Lloyd George in the hope of composing the coal dispute. Nothing was settled, but apparently the proceedings were not abortive as the deputation have arranged to report to their Congress tomorrow after which the deputation will probably have a second meeting with Mr. Lloyd George.

In chilly weather, large crowds stood outside No. 10 Downing Street until the termination of tonight's conference at nine o'clock, awaiting the first news of what had happened within the doors of the Prime Minister's residence.

CONFERENCE MEMBERS

The Triple Alliance Deputation included the members of the miners' Executive, Mr. J. H. Thomas M.P., and Mr. C. T. Cramp, respectively Secretary and President of the National Union of Railwaymen and Messrs. Robert Williams and Henry Gosling, respectively Secretary and President of the Transport Workers Federation.

The Prime Minister was accompanied by Sir Robert Horne, President of the Board of Trade, Sir Eric Geddes, Minister of Transport and Sir David Shackleton Parliamentary Secretary, Ministry of Labor.

The official report of the proceedings shows that the representatives of the railwaymen and transport-workers warmly supported the miners' wages claim.

Mr. Lloyd George insisted that if the miners persisted in their demand for increased wages, that demand must be submitted to a tribunal whose impartiality the miners could not challenge, but he proposed as an alternative to this demand, that the miners and mine-owners should meet to agree on a scheme which would make increase of wages dependent on increase of output.

WAGE QUESTION

He suggested that a level of output should be fixed, all output above this level to involve extra remuneration. This level might even be fixed below the present output, thus assuring a certain increase of wages immediately.

The Government, said the Prime Minister, were prepared to make this concession in view of the advantage to the country of securing a relation between wages and output.

He urged the miners to sus-

FAMINE RELIEF WORK TO START IN CITY TODAY

Mass Meeting Called For Four At Old German Club

TO NAME COMMITTEE

Ten Chinese And Five Foreigners Are To Supervise Campaign

The Chinese merchants and business men who are organising plans for the relief of the famine stricken inhabitants of the northern provinces held a preliminary meeting at the former German club yesterday at which plans were made for the general mass meeting of both Chinese and foreigners that is to be held at the same place at 4 o'clock today.

After a thorough canvass of the situation confronting them the leaders of the movement to organise relief measures drew up a tentative program for today's meeting. This program contemplates the selection of one Chinese and one foreign chairman to head the general committee. Of vice chairmen there will be two Chinese and two foreigners and the same arrangement will obtain as to treasurers.

The executive committee, on which will devolve most of the work of organising relief measures and putting them into effect will be composed of fifteen members, of whom ten will be Chinese and five others foreigners.

FOREIGNERS TO ACT

The Chinese members of the committee were selected at yesterday's meeting and their names will be announced at the mass meeting this afternoon. The selections of the foreign members of the committee will be left to the foreign section of the large meeting today.

Mr. Tong Shao-yi and Dr. Sun Yat-sen, both of whom were present at yesterday's meeting, expressed the hope that there would be a large attendance at the mass meeting this afternoon, and that representative members of both the Chinese and foreign communities would come to the meeting to lend their support and influence to the humanitarian movement that it is proposed to organise here.

"It is of the utmost importance that we get organised at once," said Mr. Tong. "Reports from the North are to the effect that millions of people are already in desperate plights, with the situation hourly becoming worse. Only a quick and widely organised relief movement can mitigate a situation that is already very bad."

The leaders of the plan to organize a famine relief committee in Shanghai said yesterday that every effort would be made to get the whole city interested in the project and to do so as quickly as possible.

GREAT EFFORT PLANNED

Because of the frequency of "drives" and appeals for funds for various charitable purposes during the war it is feared that some difficulty will be experienced in getting all the people aroused to the urgency of the famine situation, and for this reason the committeemen and other officers of the relief organisation plan to put forth extra efforts to impress Shanghai residents with the pitiful plight of the starving men, women and children of the famine stricken provinces.

An advertising campaign similar to those used during the war in behalf of the various war loans will be organised, although on a less elaborate scale. At the meeting today methods of soliciting funds will be discussed, along with the other duties that will fall upon the committeemen and their assistants.

The meeting today will be called at 4 o'clock sharp, in the main assembly hall on the second floor of the old German club. The room has been decorated with flags and chairs have been provided in sufficient number to provide seats for all who attend. It is urgently hoped that there will be a large attendance.

MILLIONS PLACED ON DEPOSIT AS BANK IS OPENED

First Big Sino-American Enterprise Is Given Warm Welcome

RECEPTION IS HELD

Immense Sums Flow In While Officials Are Acting As Hosts

The Shanghai branch of the Chinese-American Bank of Commerce held its formal opening in its new building on Nanking Road yesterday and four hours after the institution had begun business, while the reception that was given still was in full progress, it was announced that deposits exceeding $6,500,000 had been received, indicating what measure of success is to attend this enterprise, the first in which Chinese interests have united with those of foreigners. More than two thousand guests and friends attended the opening to wish the bank every success.

PROMINENT GUESTS

These included some of the most prominent government officials and leaders in financial and commercial circles. President Chien Nen-shun, ex-Premier of China, Mr. J. A. Thomas, American Vice-President, and Hon. Hsu En-yuan, formerly Governor of the Bank of China, of the Head Office, and Hr. H. A. Allen, Mr. Louis Shen and Mr. Sooyil K. Shen, local managers, were all there to welcome the visitors.

Among the many Chinese guests present were Messrs. Tong Shao-yi, Chu Pao-san, Shen Lien-fang, Fu Siao-en, Fu Pingkwei, Y. C. Tong, M. Y. Chung, Sung Hang-ch'ang, Yu Ya-cheng, K. P. Chen, Y. M. Chien, General Hu, Commissioner of Denfense, Mr. Heu, Commissioner of Foreign Affairs, General Heu Chief of Police, Mr. Shen, the Shanghai magistrate, and practically all the leading government officials and leading bankers, merchants, journalists, teachers and students.

Some of them came from far away, from other provinces, representing government officials and chambers of commerce. The representatives of General Li Shen of Nanking, of General Wang of Hankow, of General Chen of Kiangsi, of General Lu of Chekiang, and several other provinces came specially to wish the bank success.

LADIES ATTEND

A great number of Chinese and foreign ladies called and added to the joyous occasion of the opening day. The Shanghai international community was well represented, there being British, French, Japanese and other nationalities as prominently represented as were the Chinese and Americans.

President Hsu Shih-chang and ex-President Li Yuan-hung presented the bank with two large scrolls bearing congratulatory messages. The walls of the bank were adorned with many scrolls from prominent Chinese in all walks of life, expressing their best wishes for the success of the bank. Refreshments were served during the day and the most cordial hospitality was shown the visitors.

A number of the guests expressed the belief that the opening of this Branch of the Chinese American Bank of Commerce will tend toward the strengthening of Chinese financial relations with other countries and that the bank will be a great factor in the financial world.

OF YEAR'S GROWTH

The Chinese-American Bank of Commerce is an institution developed within the past year and is to be extended to all the larger centers of China. The bank opened yesterday is the fifth of the chain being formed, the first having been opened in Peking on February 6 of this year. Subsequently branches were opened in Tientsin, Chentow, and Hankow and active steps are being taken now to open branches in Tsinanfu and in Hankow. The capital of the institution, which is more or less a product of the direct efforts of Mr. Hsu En-yuan, is $10,000,000, half subscribed by American interests, represented chiefly by the Stone-Wiggin group of capitalists of Boston, Massachusetts, and half by leading Chinese financiers.

Mr. Hsu En-yuan, who prepared the way for the launching of the whole enterprise on the trip he made to the United States about this time last year, is again leaving today on the Empress of Asia to go to the United States to consult with the American interests concering plans to extend the scope of the bank's activities in the Far East.

Millerand Elected To Presidency Of France

NEW CHIEF EXECUTIVE AS HE APPEARED IN TRENCHES

ATTEMPT OF OPPONENTS TO OVERTHROW PREMIER OF NATION IN CONTEST FOR HIGHEST OFFICE IS BALKED

(U. S. Naval Radio)

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—An Associated Press message from Versailles announces that M. Millerand has been elected President of the Republic by the National Assembly.

M. Alexandre Millerand is 61 years of age, having been born in 1859. He was minister of war during the Great War and became Premier of France upon the retirement of M. Clemenceau.

When the intention of M. Deschanel to retire from the Presidency, because of ill health resulting from an accident, was announced great pressure was brought to bear on the Premier to stand for the office. He objected on the ground that the present laws of France do not allow the President sufficient latitude in affairs of national import and suggested that he would be of more benefit to the country in the post he then occupied. His supporters were insistent, however, and he finally allowed his name to go before the legislative bodies as a candidate.

M. Millerand has held several important public posts in the ministry of France, is the author of a number of authoritative works on politics and finance and is generally regarded as one of the most progressive and, at the same time conservative, thinkers in the Republic.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Sept. 22.—Alarmed apparently at M. Millerand's suggestion that the President of the Republic should have more extensive powers, the parties of the Left have resolved to oppose M. Millerand's election and have decided to vote at today's preparatory ballot for M. Peret, President of the Chamber, or M. Leon Bourgeois, President of the Senate, in spite of the fact that both have refused to stand as candidates.

Later.—The result of the test vote taken at a plenary session of Senators and deputies convened to nominate the presidential candidate was: for M. Millerand 528 votes; for M. Peret, president of the Chamber, 157 votes; for M. Leon Bourgeois, president of the Senate, 113 votes. M. Millerand was the only official candidate. The voting was unofficial but is accepted as a real test of strength.

British Democracy Is Extolled By Prime Minister

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 22.—In a letter to the Coalition candidate in the Ilford by-election, Mr. Lloyd George enumerates the substantial benefits which British democracy has won in the past twenty years by constitutional means in a land than which there is "no freer under the sun."

He declares that the solid attainment of a generation would be lost in one night if the extremists got their way. He refers to the conditions in Russia as a moral, saying that there the Soviet leaders have reduced the people to a state forcibly remindful of the Dark Ages.

Whatever freedom the workers there enjoyed under the old despotism has, he says, been completely taken away by the new tyranny.

FAITH IS BROKEN WITH CHINA, SAYS SENATOR HARDING

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Marion, September 22.—Senator Harding has charged President Wilson and the Versailles Commission with having broken faith with China, in having, through a secret contract, one day consented to the award of Shantung to Japan.

He said the interests of China were in the hands of the Americans, who had thus consented to the delivery of several million people to a rival nation.

Russian Friendship Is Desired, China Asserts After Barring Envoys

(Reuter's Service)

Peking, Sept. 14.—The Mandate issued yesterday terminating official relations with the Russian Minister quotes a petition from the Waichiaopu pointing out that for the last few years "Russia has been in a state of chaos and disquietude owing to the conflicts of political parties and the fighting of factions."

"Since the outbreak of the Russian revolution," "the petition states," no Government has been established to unite such parties and factions and in the circumstances there is hardly any possibility of China resuming normal diplomatic relations with Russia.

"While the Russian Minister and Consular officials accredited to China by the old Russian Regime are no longer competent to represent their country, they continue to perform the duties with which they were charged, and, having addressed a note to this effect to the Russian Legation, the Waichiaopu considers it desirable that the Government should issue an Order announcing that the Russian Minister and Russian Consuls in China will hereafter no longer be treated as diplomatic agents by this country."

FRIENDSHIP MAINTAINED

The Mandate proceeds, "On perusing the Waichiaopu's memorandum, we find what is set forth therein is a plain statement of the facts, but considering the geographical propinquity and long existing friendly relations of Russia and China, we wish it to be understood that our friendly relations with the Russian people remain unimpaired in spite of the fact that we shall cease to treat their Minister and Consuls as diplomatic agents."

"The life and property of all peaceful Russian residents in this country shall be entitled to due protection as heretofore, providing that the rules in force in this country be strictly observed."

"While continuing to maintain strict neutrality towards Russian internal strife, China will hereafter assume the same attitude towards Russia as the Allied and Associated Powers."

RUSSIAN CONCESSIONS

"As regards affairs connected with the Russian Concessions and the Chinese Eastern Railway zone, the responsible authorities are instructed to submit appropriate proposals."

It is officially pointed out, with reference to the foregoing, that no recognition will at present be extended to M. Yourin and the other representatives from Russia, though trade relations may be resumed.

Official quarters further declare that the Diplomatic Corps has raised no objection to the decision to withdraw recognition of the Russian Minister, though the Minister himself "appears to disapprove the step."

MANDATE DELIVERED

In The British Supreme Court

Mr. G. W. King (Magistrate) had the case of Kao Sion-yon v. W. A. Ellis, which was adjourned from Tuesday, again before him yesterday.

It was a judgment summons for $444.

The plaintiff was represented by Mr. J. G. Priestwood.

Defendant, answering counsel, said he did not know anything about an insurance policy maturing in July. He adhered to his statement that he paid all the money he earned to his wife.

Counsel—At the last sitting you said you were working out the figures?

Defendant—Yes, but my wife did not send me along a certain book which I wanted.

Counsel—I ask you again whether you can give me approximately the amount you paid to your wife in February?

Defendant—I cannot say approximately.

Counsel—Is it a fact that you are making this defense to a Chinese claim the medium of a family dispute?

Defendant—No, I wish this to be tried by the court.

Mrs. Ellis (in the box) said she was always under the impression that Mr. Ellis was paying his debts but she knew Mr. Ellis was "not responsible" when he was taking drink.

Mr. Ellis had been about 18 months without work. He had paid her $929 and witness had paid $1922.

Mrs. Ellis said she had nothing to do with the plaintiff.

Mr. King—Do you want your husband to go to gaol?

Mrs. Ellis said she did not, but she had to give him board and lodgings. She never told her husband to go to jail?

The Court—Are you prepared to pay anything?

Witness—No.

The Court—Then you want your husband to go to prison?

Witness—No, this is only blackmail and I told them if they did not leave me alone I would go to the British Court.

Mr. Priestwood said the procedure was most extraordinary, but defendant was qualified to go to prison.

In answer to the court defendant said he had been in hospital six months and was so sick that he knew nothing during that time. The Dean he admitted, had helped him.

Mr. Priestwood announced that a friend of defendant had agreed to help him by payment of $10 a month.

The case was then adjourned sine die.

The resignation of Mr. H. Y. Moh from the board was accepted. Dr. F. C. Tong was elected president.

PROTEST IS MADE AGAINST ARMY'S USE OF PLANES

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Sept. 24.—After the recent fighting three airplanes were sent to Mukden and three to Paotingfu from Nanyuan, while the airdrome at Nanyuan remained under the control of the Fengtien troops.

The British Minister recently protested to the Government on the ground that the terms of the contracts, by which the airplanes were purchased, distinctly stipulated that they should be used solely for commercial purposes which could not be served while the airplanes were under military control.

The Waichiaopu thereupon telegraphed to General Chang Tso-lin, who replied that he was discussing the matter with General Tsao Kun and that he would subsequently send a delegate to report to the Government on the result of the discussions.

The Frawley Company

For their last-but-one performance in Shanghai at the Lyceum last evening, the Frawley Company made the very happy choice of "Lightnin'," the divorce comedy in which Frank Bacon, a comparatively unknown actor, has "burned up Broadway" during the past two seasons and earned for himself a niche in the hall of "Famous 'Old Men' of the American stage," along with Joe Jefferson's characterisation of "Rip Van Winkle" and "Bob Acres;" Denian Thompson in "The Old Homestead;" James A. Hearn in "Shore Acres;" and David Warfield in "The Music Master."

We have not enjoyed Mr. Bacon's interpretation of the delightful old divorce-colony hotel-keeper; but we are sure that he cannot out do Mr. Frawley in the humanness of his portrayal of the character. The latter was especially excellent last evening, and the company seemed to catch the infection and "play up" to him in most acceptable fashion. Altogether, despite a somewhat slim house, the production was one to build dreams on.

Tonight, on the occasion of the last appearance in Shanghai of the Frawley Company as at present organised—and, we hope, only that—the bill will be that delicious American company, "Fair and Warmer." Let us hope the weather and the audiences will be that, wherever the Frawley Company goes!

When installing any other wood than Oak for flooring or panelling, one item must be taken into consideration in counting the cost, and that is the fact that in a very few years the floor will have to be renewed. With Oak, however, at the end of a quarter of a century, the flooring and panelling is not only more pleasing to the eye than when new, but is also worth a great deal more.

WE SUPPLY OAK FOR FLOORING, WAINSCOTING, PANELLING, ETC., ETC., KILN-DRIED AND QUALITY GUARANTEED

We give all orders personal attention. After you have placed your order with us, the flooring will be laid and all work carried out under the personal supervision of a foreign expert of the Company. This supervision costs you nothing, and we prefer to do it for you.

RICE TAKES BIG DROP; SELLING NOW AT $11.30

Thorough Investigation By Magistrate Results In Profiteer Charge

RIGID MEASURES TAKEN

Excuse Made By Guild "Pooh-pooed" By Shen And Hoarding Released

A sharp decline in the price of rice took place yesterday and Thursday when a trust said to have been formed by local profiteers was discovered by Chinese authorities. As a result, the price for high quality rice was quoted yesterday at $11.30 a drop of $6 per picul in two days. The joy among the lower class people was hysterical.

Rigid measures were adopted in the last three days by the city magistrate in hunting for the profiteers. It was discovered, it is said, that a certain gang was attempting to buy up all the rice in stock in Shanghai whether old or new with the view of monopolising the Autumn harvest and keep the price up.

PAY HIGH PRICES

They bought not only from the big rice centers like Wusih, Changshou, Changchow, Soochow and Kiangsi, but they were offering prohibitive prices to small merchants for their monopoly.

A thorough investigation is being made of the intrigue of the rice profiteers and the names of the concerned are being ascertained. At the same time the magistrate, Mr. Shen Pao-chang, has instructed the Chambers of Commerce and the Rice Guild to keep the price down, threatening drastic measures against the profiteers.

Directors of the Rice Guild at first explained that the weather conditions are responsible for the sudden jump as the Autumn harvest is not expected to be near the average quantity. But when Magistrate Shen hinted that he believed that certain directors of the guild are themselves concerned in the game and he would take such steps as he deems fit to handle them, the directors became silent.

MAGISTRATE ACTS

The words and action of the magistrate seemed to dampen the hopes of the profiteers, who at once released their supplies, causing the sudden decline yesterday.

News from Kiangsi stated that the cereal is being sold there at $9, while Soochow quality is quoted at $9.80. Pootung has harvested its new crop, which sells at $10.50 per picul.

The probe of rice profiteering will continue. Rumors have it that a gang of them has purchased $14,000,000 worth of the staple in Shanghai and vicinity. Another report says one enterprising company has concluded a purchase of 500,000-odd piculs.

Lifeguards are unknown at "Salt-air," for the water there is 27.72 percent solids, according to scientific experiments, and it is almost impossible for the bathers to sink below the surface. All one need do is to grab a newspaper, plunge in and spend a comfortable reading hour.

Vladivostok In Denial Of Move Against Zabaikal

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, Sept. 23.—The Vladivostok delegates deny having issued a proclamation calling on the population to rise up against the army in the Zabaikal, and state that, on the contrary, they are most anxious to arrive at peace in the Far East, and have no wish to exclude from the negotiations any Government which upholds democratic principles.

They request Ataman Semenoff in future to communicate direct with them or the Vladivostok authorities and thereby avoid misunderstanding.

In view of the proposed Japanese evacuation of Habarovsk, the people are panic-stricken, and many are leaving the district fearing a repetition of the events at Nikolaievsk.

The Japanese Information Bureau has published a manifesto, advising the population to remain quiet, and stating that the Japanese, acting in agreement with the Russians, are ready for any eventuality, and prepared to protect Russian citizens.

American Educator Is Called To Peking

(U. S. Naval Radio)

New York, Sept. 22.—Dr. Amadeus William Grabeau, for 18 years professor of palaeontology at Columbia University, has accepted a call to a professorship at the University of Peking, it was announced today, and will sail for the Orient sometime next month.

He began his teaching experience in 1899 as Professor of Geology at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in 1899, going to Columbia three years later and having been connected with that institution ever since. He is author of "North American Index Fossils" and "Principles of Stratigriphy."

China Desires Russ Friendship

concerning Russian interests in China and also that he would afford him all possible assistance unofficially. Dr. Yen's message concluded with the assurance that Russian interests in China would receive every attention by the Chinese government.

The Legations have reported the severance of relations to their Governments and are not inclined to discuss the matter until the views of their Governments have been ascertained. Opinion, however, does not appear to be unanimous with regard to the attitude which should be adopted towards what may be taken as a further step in the direction of the distant goal of China's eventual recovery of all her rights.

RAILWAY CONCESSIONS

One suggestion is that Russian Concessions and railway interests should be internationalised but this probably would meet with unqualified opposition on the part of the Chinese Government, particularly as regards the Concessions, where, it is pointed out, the disadvantage to nationalities, other than Russian, would be inconvenience rather than actual loss. It is recognised, however, that this latest development brings more intimately before the Powers the broad question of China's future and whether they are prepared presently to acquiesce in the gradual evolution towards the abolition of extra-territoriality, which, it is already generally recognised, will be the deciding principle in future relations with China.

Big Throng Prepares to Watch Championship Round, Messrs. Tanaka And Wade Versus Messrs. Toussaint And Carnavarro—Hard-Fought Match Expected

By Dudley Burrows

An event of more than usual interest to lovers of tennis is scheduled to be decided at the Shanghai Recreation Club, Race Course, this afternoon, beginning at 3:30 o'clock.

This will be the clash of the finalists in the 1920 open doubles championship of the courts, the preliminary rounds of which have been decided during the past fortnight under the auspices of the Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association.

The event is of general Far Eastern importance in that it will probably bring out the full playing strength of each of the four contestants—Messrs. R. Carnavarro, H. Toussaint, J. L. Wade and J. Tanaka—and enable the local devotees of tennis to decide which, in their opinion, is the best pairs-players of the current year. The winners, incidentally, are likely to play Hongkong and other centers for the championship of the Orient.

It may be argued, of course, that splendid players—better, their friends may say, than any of the above-mentioned quartet—have already been eliminated by reason of having inferior partners; but this claim will hardly hold water, in view of the careful pairing which has been in evidence all through the tournament.

PICKS TANAKA-WADE

Considering the brand of tennis which has been exhibited by the four men during the present season, the writer rather looks to see Messrs. Tanaka and Wade take the laurel wreaths for 1920—probably after a hard-fought, five-set match. This is likely to be because of the extremely clever manner in which the pair have consolidated their game, and the impetuousness of their attack.

Messrs. Carnavarro and Toussaint, it must be quickly added, are not to be considered lightly and might easily live up to the convictions of their many admirers, who look for them to score a decisive win. Carnavarro, in particular, has been playing magnificent tennis right through the tourney; while his partner, though not contributing much in the way of "brilliant" tennis, has been a tower of steady strength to his more dashing associate.

EXPECT BIG GALLERY

Should the weather decide to behave itself there is little doubt that a large and picturesque audience will be on hand to see the sport; especially as the Association, through its Honorable Secretary, Mr. A. H. George, has announced that the public is welcome.

In case of rain or other preventive conditions the match will likely go over until Monday; in which event the singles tournament, scheduled to begin then, may be advanced one day.

The second round of the singles tournament is now scheduled for Wednesday next and the third round for the following Saturday. Dates for the semi-final and final rounds will be announced later by Secretary George.

Two-Sport Treat For Devotees Of Tennis And Cricket

An opportunity for members of the Shanghai Cricket Club and their freinds to enjoy both the greater part of what promises to be an excellent cricket match and all of the 1920 championship lawn tennis doubles is provided by the advancement of the commencing hour for the latter event to 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Those fortunate enough to have entry to the S. C. C. may assemble at 1:15, see two hours of the Interport Trials match between the teams captained by Messrs. Ollerdessen and Billings, respectively, and then walk over to the "Rec" grounds for the tennis.

This plan will undoubtedly be adopted by a large number of local sport-lovers.

Clay Pigeon Shoot

The "President's" Cup of the Shanghai Clay Pigeon Club will be shot for tomorrow, beginning at 3:45 o'clock. Conditions will be 40 birds under club handicap.

As the shoot will be in the nature of practice for the coming match against Tientsin next Wednesday, as many birds as possible will be fired at from the trap stand.

Barff To Umpire Cricket At Hankow

Mr. C. S. Barff, veteran Shanghai cricketer, accompanied the S.C.C. team which left last night on the s.s. Tuckwo for Hankow, where they will engage in a two-innings match on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

Mr. Barff, a keen judge of the game for many years, will act as Shanghai's umpire in the match, regarding which great interested is reported to have been developed in the up-river community.

RACING AT KIANGWAN

The opening day's program of a two-day race meeting of the International Recreation Club will be offered today at the Kiangwan track with the first saddling bell at 1:30 o'clock. The second day of the meeting will be Monday. For both days the usual special train and motor car service from the garages will be provided.

Pairs Final And Rink Match Are On Program For Sportsmen Here

By "Skip"

There will be a lot doing today in the Lawn Bowls world, the "Pairs" Final at the Lawn Bowls Club at 3 p.m. and also a rink match at the same time and place, in which the Hongkong players will take part. At Hongkew Park the Junior Golf Club will have their winding up day, the greens are specially set apart for the use of ladies to show their skill at the ancient game. There are some very handsome prizes which have been donated by members. The wives, sisters or friends of members of other Clubs are cordially invited to take part. Tea will be provided on the ground. The Club's Cups won during the season will also be presented. At the conclusion of the Shanghai Pairs match at the Race Course the Cups will be presented for the Singles, Pairs and Rinks Championship.

HONGKONG vs. LAWN BOWLS CLUB

The Hongkong Interport team lost their last match yesterday to the Lawn Bowls Club by 4 points. They were decidedly unlucky as on their play they deserved to win.

By a great effort they drew within two points of the Lawn Bowls Club, score 18-20, and were laying two when Buckley got a kick off an outside wood at the 20th end and laid the shot.

If this had not occurred the visitors would have tied and a great finish would have been the result. The upshot was that the locals won by 4 shots.

The game was very even all through, the scores being level at the 7th and 10th end, and Hongkong were leading at the 15th by 14 to 13.

The L.B.C. secured two 2's and a three and made the score 20 to 14 in their favor when Hongkong got in a four and as mentioned lost the 20th end after laying a safe two.

For Hongkong all played well, Farrell, Muirhead and Pile being particularly safe, and Lapsley in and out.

On the Lawn Bowls Club side Gaines was very good and Buckley saved several times. The Hongkong team have put up some real good fights but have been unfortunate.

They have met the cream of Shanghai bowlers and certainly deserved better success, they have proved themselves to be the best of sports and played the game right through.

Teams:

S.L.B.C.—J. Buckley (skip), G. L. Campbell, J. D. Gaines and F. Bankham 22.

Hongkong.—R. Lapsley (skip), P. Farrell, J. Muirhead and A. G. Pile 13.

Speaking Of Beef

All the dumbbells aren't in gymnasiums. Some bird is buzzing us that we can reduce the fat cost of fat by eating the lean. You can lower the powerful price of sirloins by chewing short ribs and briskets. This cuckoo has drawn a map of a cow with red, green, cerise and heliotrope pins all over it like the battle maps of the western front. He's right. It's a battle map.

He chirps that by buying economical cuts of the bull's wife we can wipe off the high cost of living cleaner than Jack Spratt's platter.

Try to do it. You have about as much chance as a clay pipe in a shooting gallery.

Are there any economical cuts of the Koh-i-noor diamond?

Are there any cheap round steaks in a Persian rug?

Are there any moderate priced sirloins on a sealskin coat?

You've got about as much chance of grabbing a cheap attack of indigestion on a meat diet as Robinson Crusoe had of leaving his island for the week-ends. The only way to save any darby now is to live on a Mack Sennet scenario diet of pie. Eat it with a fork. The Bible says that he who lives by the knife, shall perish by the knife. Besides, table etiquette says it's all wrong.

The cow is nature's greatest gift to man. That is, it's a gift until the butcher gets hold of it. The bovine gives us milk, blue and white. It gives us meat. It tries to give us butter, but we get oleomargarine. The cow also gives us hash, beef stew and slumgullion.

Anybody who has ever scoffed in a sudden lunch room knows that the cow gives us chicken croquettes.

None but a noble animal would try to do a hen's work.

Don't judge a cow by its expression. Don't misjudge a cow by the butchers it associates with. Unlike human beings, a cow doesn't get better after it dies. It gets worse. And when its soul is on that abatteir Weejee board, the butcher's block, a cow is sure one fine highwayman.

The butchers state that the high expense of crow meat is due to automobile deliveries and the cost of gasoline. That explains both the cost and the taste.

LEONARD SIGNS FOR 15-ROUND GARDEN FIGHT

Lightweight Champion Guaranteed $50,000 For Bout To Be Held Next Month

New York, August 17.—Tex Rickard, manager of Madison Square Garden, has signed Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion, to box against an opponent to be named later in the opening bout at Madison Square Garden. Rickard yesterday guaranteed Leonard $50,000 for his end of the bout. Leonard is to post a forfeit of $20,000 today to make the weight called for by the new rules, 135 pounds, eight hours before the bout.

The opening bout at the Garden will be held next month. The exact date has not yet been settled upon, nor Leonard's opponent been picked. The other man will be one of four—Eddie Fitzsimmons, Charlie White, Johnny Dundee or Joe Welling.

Dundee and Leonard have fought many bouts and have stepped at a pretty lively pace to no particular decision. The bout at the Garden will be to a decision by two judges and a referee under the new boxing law of New York State. Leonard recently knocked out Charlie White, though White gave him a stiff battle before he dropped. It is probable that Leonard's antagonist in the Garden will be one of these two.

This will settle all the guessing as to Leonard's weight. He will have to be weighed according to the new boxing rules eight hours before the bout. It will be something of a novelty to fix any limit on the tonnage of the lightweight division.

The flat guarantee of $50,000 is the highest sum ever offered to a lightweight. It is even higher than the purse which Rickard paid to Battling Nelson to meet Joe Gans at Goldfield, Nev. This was the first bout staged by Rickard. It was Rickard's intention not to start boxing at the Garden until a later date but he has been pressed by the fight fans to start next month.

NATIONS AGREE TO STANDARDISE THE GOLF BALL

America And Britain Will Henceforth Restrict The Weight And Size

BY ABE MITCHELL

London, Aug. 21.—There is doubt and confusion in regard to the agreement come to with America for a standard golf ball, but it is really quite simple, and would have been understood at once by all if the offical announcement had been made in plain straightforward terms and without resorting to obscure terms of decimals.

As a matter of fact, there is to be no standard ball. Indeed, the choice of a ball will be only very slightly less than at the present time. You will still be able to go into the professional's shop and pick one from many of different sizes and weights.

The decision come to is really an American one. The English authorities were prepared, after exhaustive inquiry, to introduce an actual standard ball, and the standard they fixed upon was a ball that would float. But the American delegates were not prepared to agree to this. Ballots had been taken on the question in all the leading American clubs, and I understand that the "No's" against a floater outnumbered the "Yes's" by as much as 99 percent. In face of this very emphatic verdict it was impossible for the delegates to agree to the British suggestion.

It has been said that British club golfers should have been consulted in the same way as those of America. Some day, when St Andrews have surrendered their powers, important questions of this sort will probably be submitted to them.

PUNCH WINS MORE BOUTS THAN CLEVERNESS IN RING, SAYS BRITISH OBSERVER

Urges Young Boxers To Pay More Attention To Developing A "Wallop" And Less To 'Pretty" Prowess—Points To Success Of "Sluggers" In Recent Bouts

By "Right Cross"

London, July 22.—It is time that our young boxers developed an appreciation of the power of a punch. For many years it has been a gospel in British boxing circles that it is cleverness which wins. In a measure that is true; but there remains the fact that one punch that is hard enough and delivered in the right place, will, by its effectiveness, more than counterbarance all the scientific scoring of points which might have been accomplished by the receiver of that big hit in many preceding rounds.

In most of the big contests we have had of late it has been driven home to the students of British boxing that the cultivation of skill has resulted in the overlooking of the necessity of force. Writing from memory and of the big contests which have taken place recently one can refer to the opening night of the Holland Park Hall, and quote cases in support of the foregoing.

LEDOUX vs. HIGGINS

On that evening Charles Ledoux of France, met our bantam-weight champion, Jim Higgins. The latter is a clever little boxer, and he can hit very hard, but he thought more in this contest about being clever than he did about hitting hard. Ledoux did not, and Ledoux won by a knock-out. On the same evening Arthur Wyns, the Belgian, met our feather-weight champion, Mike Honeyman. Wyns bothered nothing at all about science, but he gave Honeyman such a terrible hiding that it would have been a kindness on the part of the referee had the latter stopped the contest before he did.

Joe Beckett beat Billy Wells twice by big hits rather than pretty boxing, and the British champion defeated Tommy Burns when he concentrated upon hitting hard after he had gone along on the low gear for a few rounds.

WYNS' HARD PUNCH

To revert to Wyns. The Belgian may not be nearly so pretty a boxer as Mike Honeyman, Francis Rossi and Joe Conn, but he has reduced them all to hopelessness by the power of his punching and his mental determination to win by that power.

Remembering that one big punch, skilfully delivered, will wipe out all the advantage of points scored with nice playful skill is the strong point of the contest-winners of today, and while everyone would be sorry to see the good science of boxing wiped out to the encouragement of wallop-mongering, the fact remains that our British boxers of the present day are not paying sufficient attention to the development of their punching muscles and the training of their minds to time and place their hits.

BECKETT EXPLAINS

Take the case of Carpentier in his display against Beckett. The latter admitted that he had no "feeling" for his man when he was knocked out. There you have an admitted instance of lack of mental alertness which Carpentier took full advantage of by banging in his right hand on the spot where punches tell most. The French champion, in spite of his rather effeminate dressing gown and his pretty ways of acknowledging the plaudits of the spectators, did not overlook the fact that he was there to be vigorous, not merely to look nice.

Hal Chase Is Barred From Coast League

Hal Chase, once the most idolised players in New York when he played first base for the Yankees and was known as "Prince Hal," stands today barred from all parks in the Pacific Coast League, according to word from California.

President W. H. McCarthy of the Coast League, has announced that Chase would not be permitted to pass through the gates of the parks in the league after an investigation of charges that gambling had prevailed at the games in the circuit.

LITERARY TASTES OF VARSITY MEN

Yalensians Interested In Poetry—Harvard Boys Like The More Substantial

Boston, August 14.—An interesting comparison of Harvard and Yale as revealed in the undergraduate tastes for reading was recently made by Maurice Firuski, himself a Yale man, proprietor of a bookshop just off Harvard Square in Cambridge. Mr. Firuski has also sold books to young Yalensians in New Haven, so he ought to have first-hand experience to back up his judgment that Yale students are more interested in poetry, whereas at Harvard it is books on politics, economics ad government that the students most sell for.

"To the outsider," says Mr. Firuski, whose comment appears in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin, "Harvard is distinctly a cosmopolitan, a worldly place, where individuals consider their loyalty to the institution incomplete unless it include a knowledge of what is going on elsewhere.

"At New Haven (unless violent changes have recently come about) this is not the case. Yale College in its very physical form must produce a different undergraduate—not careless of what goes on elsewhere, but more eager to make his own little community a Utopia. At this moment there must be dozen of young men at New Haven writing verse—and having it published. And there English literature by and large, has the field pretty well to itself. The ardent Yale reader knows his Masefield and De la Mare, his Davies, Dunsany and Sassoon. And if he is interested in contemporary writers to a large degree, this at least reflects an inspiring instructor and an enthusiastic reader.

"All of this of course exists at Harvard, but in about the same degree that Yale men rush for Blue Books or Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Webb. Whatever the final effect, be it said that the Harvard method manages to dig deeper, to strike firmer roots. Doubtless at New Haven Horace and Juvenal and Cicero are still active. But that eager discrimination in editions which is the test of bookish culture is there centered about the years 1800-1921 rather than in the Harvard way, 1800-[illegible] B. C. It has often occurred to the writer that when Sir William Osler spoke of "The Old Humanities and the New Science," he might well have had Harvard in mind; and similarly H. G. Wells accurately describes the Yale attitude in his "Discovery of the Future."

In an editorial comment the Harvard Alumni Bulletin says: "The literary capital of America has long since moved from Boston to New York, and Yale in New Haven has doubtless benefited by the change. At any rate, the number of youthful poets at Yale just now is particularly large."

TO MAP NORTH GREENLAND

Danish Explorer Will Use Motor Tractor In Crossing Ice

Copenhagen, July 13.—Lauge Koch, Danish explorer, who heads an expedition to Northern Greenland, in an interview before his departure said the enterprise was in the nature of a jubilee expedition in honor of the 200th anniversary of the arrival in Greenland of Hans Egedes, the Danish missionary.

"During these 200 years Greenland has been thoroughly explored," said M. Koch. "North Greenland, however, has never been mapped out. This is the aim of the present expedition, because otherwise Denmark would be obliged to apply sovereignty to regions which had not yet been visited by white men.

"I have already proved to the satisfaction of American and British scientists that in Northern Greenland there is a mountain range 2,000 feet high, the size of the Caucasus range. I further want to penetrate the interior of Pearyland, leaving direct for Ingefield Gold, from which point I will cross inland ice on a motor tractor, establishing a depot at Warmingland. Trials conducted during the last few months prove that tractors can attain a speed of six kilometers an hour, equaling the speed of a dog sled.

"The expedition will be gone three years, at the end of which time the remaining fourth of Greeland will have been mapped. I also expect to bring back a very interesting geological collection."

Hongkong Market

In their report dated September 17, Messrs. Moxon and Taylor write as follows:

We have to record a dull week except that a small demand exists for investment stocks. The more speculative stocks, however, are dull and depressed with a very small business passing.

London continues to improve, and the market there keeps steady with a firm tendency.

The slight improvement in Shanghai stocks has not been maintained, and the market there is now very dull and lifeless again.

Alterations from last week are:

Hongkong Banks.—Have been done during the week at various figures between $625 and $632½. At the close the rate is $620.

Investment Stocks:

Central Estates.—At $110, Hongkong Hotels at $141 ex dividend and Hongkong Lands at $115 are all in demand at quotations.

Hongkong Docks.—At $150 and Wharves at $87 could be placed at quotations.

China Sugar.—Have suddenly advanced from $216 to $225 at which the market closes uncertain.

Unions.—Have been the medium of a small business between $183 and $186.

Hongkong Fires.—Have again been done at $318 and Cantons have further buyers at $370.

Shells.—Keep steady at 155/- and Anglo Egyptians "B" have advanced to £3.

Cements.—Have buyers at $8.35, Waterboats at $14, Peak Tramways at $6.10, Ropes at $23, William Powells at $13, and Watson at $6.75.

Exchange.—The demand selling rate on London is 4s. 3 1/4d. and the T.T. selling rate on Shanghai is 70¼.

Freight Market

Messrs. Wheelock and Co. write as follows:

The situation in our Outward Freight markets is as follows:

To United Kingdom and Continent.—Locally there is no export trade worth speaking about and there is nothing going forward except old contract cargo but there is some inquiry from Hankow owing to the commencement of the sesamum seeds season which should increase in the near future.

Coastwise.—This market has remained very quiet since last writing and there has been very little business doing but prospects point to a very busy Autumn season, both from the river and the North where crops are reported to be well up to the average.

Catalogued for Sale: 2,220,395 lbs. (about 991 tons).

Sold: 1,175,319 lbs. (about 524 tons).

The prices realised at this week's auction shows a further decline in all grades. It was comparatively easy to find buyers of Standard Grades or for qualities which have been sold short by "bears," but otherwise the general demand was poor.

Standard Ribbed Smoked Sheet sold at 61½ cents at the commencement of the sales and Standard First Latex Crepe at 63½ cents. There were many buyers at these prices and consequently their respective values advanced to 62 and 64 cents before long. There was a good demand for Good F.A.Q. Sheet, several lots realising 61 cents.

Lower Grades of Crepe showed a decline of 5 to 10 cents against last week's prices, with only a few buyers even at the lower level.

At the continuation today, there was a still stronger inquiry for the Standard Grades, and in spite of the report of a ¼d. decline in London, Sheet realised 63 cents, 2 lots changing hands at 63½, showing decline of 6 cents on the week, whilst First Latex went to 64, 3 lots making 64¼ or 5½ cents decline on the week. Lower Grades sold at yesterday's prices.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in civilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies,

PROFITEERS OF 1,600 YEARS AGO

Musty Roman Records Disclose That They Defied Mighty Ruler In Those Days

Rome, August 20.—Let those who can draw comfort from the fact know that H. C. L. is no newer than many other plagues which poor humanity suffers from. In fact, the citizens of Rome, now tormented with further leaps and bounds in prices, are trying to console themselves with the discovery, made by those who read ancient books, that this city was bothered with the profiteer 1,600 years ago.

In the reign of Diocletian, who flourished in 300 A. D., the Emperor was so disturbed by his subjects, who suffered from the H. C. L., that he fixed the prices of foodstuffs and drew a schedule for workmen's wages. To read his proclamation is to read the many long-winded documents which food controllers, Mayors and other public functionaries have perpetrated in the past three or four years. The condemning of the profiteer, "moved by a greed for profit which is out of all proportion to the real value of the goods he sells," and the imperial wish that his "fixed prices should be respected throughout the Empire," have a familiar ring which makes glad the hearts of historians who want to make history popular.

But relief comfort and joy to stop there. For it is enough to read a little further to discover that the good Emperor's laws and curses against newly rich and profiteers were as useless sixteen centuries ago as they are today. And, in despair, the good old Roman tyrant implores his "honest and patriotic subjects" to restore to the one and only remedy, boycott of high priced goods.

With this ruler's history fresh in their minds, the modern citizens of ancient Rome are now being informed that the following goods are to go up:

Aluminum goods, 500 percent.; nickel, copper goods and utensils, 500 percent; goods for household use, such as knives, forks and spoons, 500 perpent; iron goods of all kinds, 600 percent; locks and bolts, 700 precent; earthenware and china, from 400 to 600 percent. All these increases are on present prices, which are from 300 to 1,000 percent above pre-war prices.

HUGE BRITISH WAR COSTS

Government Spent More Since 1914 Than In Previous 225 Years

That the British have already, in a period of six years, paid in the form of taxes and war contributions 36 percent—about twenty billion dollars—of their enormous war expenses is one of the several amazing facts disclosed in "English Public Finance," recently published by the Bankers Trust Company. It is, of course, practically impossible for the mind to grasp the colossal sums expended by the British Government since 1914, but some fairly appropriate impression can be gathered from the statement that during these six years the cost was greater than that of running the Government, fighting eight big wars and many little ones, maintaining peace-time armies, colonising and meeting cumulative expenses of improving the social condition of her population over a period of two and a quarter centuries.

From March 31, 1914 to March 31, 1920, the British Government spent £11,268,000,000, about fifty-six billion dollars. The previous 225 years cost the Government £10,944,000,000. Nevertheless, although last year there was an interest charge on the national debt fifteen times greater than the similar charge before the war, yet 80 percent of the year's expense was paid outright.

A reference to past performances of the British as debtors shows that they have not failed since the Revolution of 1688, to meet all demands of creditors in full. And, according to this duty of the subject, their financial burdens today are not much greater, in proportion to national wealth and income, than those successfully borne in the past. For example, at the end of the wars wth Napoleon, Great Britain had a debt of £850,000,000 and an estimated wealth of £2,700,000,000. At the present time her debt is £8,000,000,000 and her estimated wealth £24,000,000,000—or approximately the same ratio as in the Napoleonic period.

Braves Death in the Jungles to Bring His Bride a Bird

Like a Knight of Old Artist Tartoue Will Dare Again the Perils of the Wilds to Save His Lovely Wife the Sorrow of Losing Once More Her Rare Song-sters

Artist Tartoue, His Wife and the Birds.

Madame Pierre Tartoue, With Her Two Unique Bird Companions, the Loss of One of Which So Nearly Broke Her Heart.

IN the ancient days of the troubadours, when brave knights carried the colors of fair ladies into jousting tournaments, love was a term synonymous with devotion, bold deeds done for the favor of a dainty mistress, hazardous feats performed for no other reward than a smile from pretty lips.

When Saint George killed the dragon there were countless other knights who looked upon the deed as nothing they themselves would not have done if the inspiration had been the desire of a beloved one.

Nowadays, though, romance most often is jostled aside in the stress and friction of a practical age. Of fair ladies there are just as many as ever, and of brave suitors there still is an equal number, but office hours now take up the time that used to be given to day dreams of love, and the evening fox trot and one-step represent the extent of the danger most young men are willing to court in pursuit of feminine preference.

How refreshing it is, then, to find a knight of to-day, a young husband whose romance has not dwindled with the passing of the honeymoon, but, instead, has deepened and expanded, embracing every hour of night and day, and become so great and wonderful a thing that a vagrant tear, falling from his young wife's eye, is enough to send him, heart a-beat, into far corners of the earth, into the midst of human cannibals and dread fevers, at enormous business sacrifices, that a whim may be gratified and the tear replaced with a smile!

This young husband, who might well inspire a paraphrase of the ancient query, "Was there ever so great a love as his?" is the noted artist, portrait painter and famous host at some of the most bizarre of social fetes, Pierre Tartoue, who came from France to settle in America a few years ago. Eighty thousand dollars is quite the usual fee for this portraitist to ask a doting mamma for the portrait of her debutante daughter, or a fashionable matron to pay him for her own pastel reproduction on canvas. Among his most famous subjects have been Cardinal Farley, Mrs. Edward B. Close and her children, Mrs. Joel Thorne, Mrs. Coleman du Pont de Nemours, "Fifi" Widener, General Pershing and many others who gave their checks in five figures for the privilege of posing for him. It was not long ago that one of Mr. Tartoue's pastels, "The God of Happiness," an unfinished sketch of which is shown on this page, with Mrs. Tartoue sitting in front of it, was purchased by Mrs. du Pont du Nemours for $600,000 after it had hung in some of the foremost exhibitions in America and France.

Mrs. Tartoue was the beautiful Claudie Windsor, of California. The two were married but a few months ago. It was a romance of many interesting details—just the sort of courtship and marriage one might expect from a temperamental, successful young artist, courted by society as one of its most prized "catches," and a California heiress with whom the famous young painter fell in love at first sight.

There were those who whispered behind their fans when the marriage was announced, and when the artist brought back to the gay studio world of New York his California bride. Surely, said these whispers, the gallant Pierre would never tie himself down to a love that consumed so much of his time and separated him from so many of those blithe little studio affairs for which the studio world is noted. He had been known as one of the most successful and original creators of impromptu entertainments in which color, luxury and the unique ran riot; his costly $100,000 studio had been the centre of a bohemianism de luxe which made it one of the most charming rendezvous in New York. The introduction of a bride, even though she were wondrously beautiful, into such a life is not always a successful venture—and it wouldn't be in this case, said these whispers.

Mme. Tartoue, from a Painting by Her Husband.

But time disproved these predictions. A new glow seemed to warm the canvases upon which Pierre painted his portraits. The eyes of his matrons and debutantes seemed to look out from their frames with a new piquancy. His brush, Pierre told his wondering critics, had found the skill with which to paint the ineffable flush of love—it was his realization of what feminine eyes may hold in dreamy fondness; what the cheek may tell when the heart is beating with a new rapture; how the lips unconsciously relax when the mind is attuned to kisses—it was this realization which had come to him out of his honeymoon and which struggled always for expression when his brush traced feminine features. So he explained the marvels in his new portraits to his friends.

The young bride fitted into the studio whirl—and became its leader. The honeymoon was in South America, where many of the wives of rich South Americans sar for the sojourning bridegroom.

There was a little excursion into the interior of Colombia, and as a souvenir of this visit the governor of an interior province presented the visiting bride two of the rarest and most beautiful singing birds in the world—the famous turpiale. The turpiale is a gorgeously colored songster, offspring in some mysterious past age of the thursh family, which has the rare accomplishment of being able to "carry the melody" of almost any song or instrumental music which is played for it and which it enjoys. Its song is brilliant and with a whistling resonance, and even its own characteristic bursts of melody are as rhythmic as the compositions of the masters.

Few of these birds ever have reached civilization. Their home is in the dense underbrush of the interior of the Atlantico Province of Colombia, where live the cannibal Goargira tribes, the cruelest and most primitive savages of the world. These birds have a superstitious religious significance to these savages, and it is seldom one of them is seen outside the brush.

Mme. Tartoue is an accomplished musician. The peculiar talent of the turpiale birds fascinated her. They became her pets. She taught them to sing arias of grand opera, and the two birds became so accomplished that it was necessary only for their young mistress to start the opening strains of a favorite song, or to have the phonograph play a few measures of it, when both birds would pick it up in unison and complete the song.

The presence of these rare and accomplished pets in the Tartoue studio was a nine days wonder in New York. Mme. Tartoue had dainty platinum chains made for them, with little clasps to snap around their legs, and with the chains attached to rings on her fingers she took the birds out as companions on her daily walks along Fifth avenue. In the fashionable hotel supper rooms the two pets were as familiar to the habitues as were the artist and his young bride themselves, and there was no entertainment in the Tartoue studio complete without them.

One morning, but a few days ago, there came a tragedy. The studio window was open; from the outside came the Summer time breath from Central Park but a block away. The youngest of the two birds, the female, was tempted. The windows had been open before but perhaps the lure of the outdoors, wafted in on Summer breeze, had never been so strong. There was a flutter of wings, a flash of color streaking across the studio—and the little turpiale was gone on a venture into the outdoors.

Mme. Tartoue was disconsolate. Her scream brought Pierre rushing from his workroom where a haughty matron, jealous of her time, was sitting for her portrait. In a burst of hysterical tears Mme. Tartoue told her husband of the desertion of one of her pets. Ignoring the restlessness of the rich patroness in the workroom Pierre flung on his coat and, with the bird's mate attached to his finger, dashed into the park. Throughout the day, and long into the night, Pierre and the lone bird wandered into the nooks and corners of the great park, Pierre whistling and the turpiale singing its call to its mate. But the quest was in vain.

When Pierre returned crestfallen to the studio he found his young wife exhausted from grief and anxiety. The tears he grieved to see were on her cheek.

Now, what would the average husband of to-day—these days when there are supposed to be no more troubadours—do? He would take his wife in his arms, of course, but would he not content himself with soothing her hurt, with the promise that he would purchase for her another pet, a dog or a canary? Perhaps, but not Pierre. For Pierre the days of the troubadours when knights dared death for a new time when their loves beckoned, are not yet gone.

There is but one place in the world from where another turpiale to take the place of the lost one might be brought. This is the brush of Colombia, 3,000 miles away. And even there the watchfulness of savages noted for their characteristic trait of killing their enemies, beheading them and feeding upon carcasses, must be dealt with before a feather songster might be captured to replace the one that was lost.

In Pierre's mind there might have arisen the vision of countless human heads severed from the bodies on which they had grown impaled on sticks along the pathways, each head shrunken by some mysterious chemistry of which the Goagira alone know, to the size of a baseball, with the hair, also shrunken but still growing. On his honeymoon he had seen a long row of shrunken heads, trophies of victorious raids against neighbor enemies—but now he forgot them. He banished the tear hovering on his young wife's cheek not with promises or soothings, but with the calm announcement that he would take the next steamer for South America, for Colombia, and having arrived there he would push at once into the lands of the Goagira and come out with a new turpiale—a new pet to take the place of the one that was gone.

"But your work, my Pierre, your portraits—the many commissions you now have and must finish in a hurry—what of them?" asked the astounded Mme. Tartoue.

"What is work—what are portraits—what is money or commissions when my wife has reason for tears?" Pierre answered. "I shall go upon the next steamer and I will be content if I but find another turpiale as beautiful as the one we lost and as fitting a mate for the one that is left, even if I never again have another commission to paint a portrait."

There was great consternation among half a dozen rich and fashionable mammas when the decision of Pierre became known. There were that many unfinished portraits upon his easels. They besieged him to give them long sittings—to give to them the days that intervened before his steamer sailed—but Pierre would have none of them. The huge advance commissions that had been paid him he returned. "Perhaps," he said, "he would come back without a bird—perhaps he would be killed—in either event their portraits never would be finished. If he came back, escaped the fevers, escaped the savages, and with a new turpiale to amuse his wife and console her—then he would think of portraits and such things as commissions again—but time would have to tell."

Mme. Tartoue remonstrated with her impulsive young husband—and then he, in turn, reproached her. "How could she think of him that he would let miles or perils or mere money prevent him from restoring the pet that had flown out the window when its loss had so pained her?"

There were hurried preparations; the day for the sailing of the steamer came near, and then, another morning when the studio windows were raised, the little truant came flying in and was found by its mistress pecking furiously at the bars of the cage in which its mate fluttered in ecstacies at the imminence of reunion. Mme. Tartoue was overjoyed. For an hour the plans for the trip to South America were forgotten. But Pierre noticed restraint in his wife's happiness.

"I cannot but be fearful, Pierre," she said wistfully. "Perhaps another time one of my turpiale will fly away and not return—and, besides, I can no longer trust my little pet. She has been away from me whole nights and days—and the sparrows and blackbirds of the park are such uncouth companions."

"Then I shall go, just the same—we will run no more risks, and if the little truant does not regain your confidence you shall have another to replace it."

Indeed, can there be a greater love than this?

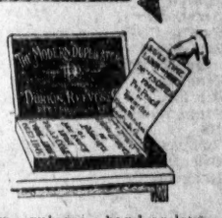
MODERN DUPLICATORS

TO OPERATE THE "MODERN" DUPLICATOR-PRINTER:



You simply make one original with pen or typewriter, using triple strength copying ink or typewriter ribbon, or copying pencil as if it were the only one you wanted, then put that one on the Duplicator—writing side down—rub your hand or leveler over it to smooth it out evenly, allow it to remain on the Duplicator about two minutes and the writing is transferred to the Duplicator. You then take your letter or original writing or drawing off the Duplicator and put on blank sheets of paper, postal cards or cloth, one at a time, and run leveler or hand over same and perfect duplicate copies of the original will be printed. In this way you can print up to 75 duplicate copies from each original in 15 minutes; them when the duplicates begin to show up pale, simply erase the impression from the duplicator with damp sponge, and then if you want more of the same kind of duplicates, put on the first one (the original) that you wrote and repeat as above.

Coal Market

In their report dated September 23, Messrs. Wheelock and Co. write as follows:

Japan Coal.—Our local market continues quiet, no new business has been done and there is really nothing fresh to write about: stocks on the spot are up to the anverage whilst arrivals and deliveries continue steady in the usual way.

The coal market in Japan is also very quiet at the moment and it is still too early to talk about supplies for next year.

Fushun Coal.—No change.

Chinese Coal to Europe etc.—In spite of all the talk and rumors of large contracts having been made for delivery to Europe and south America and other parts of the world—we have been unable so far to gain any confirmation of the same except as regards the shipment to Denmark mentioned in our report dated August 12.

Kaiping Coal.—Owing to movement of troops and famine refugees in the North, rolling stock has been requistioned for this purpose. This has interfered considerably with the regular transportation of coal to shipping port and consequently arrivals have been fewer and stocks very much reduced.

Senator Harding And China

SENATOR Harding is going far afield. If he is accurately quoted in today's cables, he charged, in a speech made at Marion on Sept. 22 that "President Wilson and the Versailles Commission had broken faith with China, in having through a secret contract, one day consented to the award of Shantung to Japan. He said the interests of China were in the hands of the Americans, who had thus consented to the delivery of several million people to a rival nation."

If Senator Harding's case is so weak that he is compelled to twist the facts and traduce the President of his own country in order to score a point the value of which is dubious, he will find the going rather rough on November 2. President Wilsin did not break faith with China. He did what he could for China. His hands were tied by the secret agreement which Japan forced on the Allies during the darkest period of the war under which Great Britain, France and Italy consented that the German rights in Shantung should go to Japan rather than revert to China. There was no way that the Allies could abrogate this agreement. They were bound by it. This being the fact, why should Senator Harding seek to place the blame on President Wilson's shoulders?

The Senator again is wrong when he says that the United States consented to the award of Shantung to Japan. Nobody consented to that. Shantung has not been awarded to Japan and therefore "several millions of people have not been delivered to a rival country."

As a matter of fact the Peace Treaty and the League Covenant guarantee China in the possession of Shantung. Looking at the Far Eastern situation as a matter of cold international law, the Powers have no right to be more friendly to China than they are to Japan. Their concern, the concern of the League of Nations, is to see that no wrong is worked by a strong power upon a weak one. The League of Nations will not turn out badly for China if China will but do her part. If Japan through possession of the former German rights in Shantung, can dominate that province, the fault will be China's.

Meantime, we regret that Mr. Harding was not familiar with the facts when he spoke, for the statements he has made, if uncontroverted, might very easily undermine American interests in China.

Deep Question

"Daddy," asked a mite of eight Summers, "God makes us do the good things, doesn't he?"

"Yes," replied the father.

"And Satan makes us do the naughty things?"

Again, yes.

"Well, who makes us do all the funny ones?"

Correspondence

THE ITALIAN OPIUM CASE

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir:—Judges have to apply the Law, not to try to please the public and to avoid hurting the feelings of such persons as X.

Criticism is easy, especially when the critic is not thoroughly conversant with the subject he takes to deal with; and I cannot suppose that X is acquainted with the intricacies of Italian Law and procedure, since he thinks that with the evidence supplied by the Police I would have been justified in taking illico et abrupto the drastic step of closing the godowns of the Sino-Italian Dispensary.

Dignity prevents me from discussing all the points raised by X, who goes so far in his epistle as to grossly insult the Italian Consulate.

To the insult I answer in a truly Christian spirit, with a friendly advice to those Xs who may take interest in this case: to try to be able, before expressing themselves in one way or another, to affix to their name the LL.D. in addition to the D.D., and not to keep their eyes perpetually turned skyward, but to lower them frequently on an authoritative text of Law of Evidence.

Yours faithfully,
GIUSEPPE ROS,
Italian Consular Judge.

P. S.—X is apparently in possession of more detailed evidence than the Police. He mentions a ticket issued from the Sino-Italian Dispensary and given away with a tin of opium; he alleges that twenty of such tickets were exchangeable for a free tin of opium. Why were such tickets (undoubtedly very important documents) not produced in Court? Had Mr. Faithfull forgotten all about it?

BRITAIN AND THE MONROE DOCTRINE

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—I realise that the task is a hopeless one but taking advantage of your kind permission I will again burden the editor and a long suffering public.

Almost all of the students of this question are agreed that it was only because the nations of Europe did not want to challenge Great Britain's control of the sea that they did not challenge the Monroe Doctrine and using President Wilson for my present authority I would like to "Go back a bit into history."

Until 1867 (I believe that the date is correct, however, for this purpose a few years do not greatly matter) Russia had possession of that part of America known as Alaska, and her actions in that territory were in many instances very harmful to the interests of other nations.

At the end of the Napoleonic Wars the statesmen of Europe, readjusting the affairs of Europe along lines that would best counteract the Spirit of Liberty that had come out of the French Revolution, had formed the "Holy Alliance" and in a measure about 1818 attained their end on the Continent. One of the most ardent and staunch supporters of the Alliance was the Tsar of Russia. Spain, who had lost a number of her possessions in the Western Hemisphere during these wars, appealed to the Alliance for assistance in regaining her lost possessions.

Mr. George Canning (British Minister) realising what this would mean to the trade of Great Britian in the South, proposed to Mr. Rush (American Minister to the Court of St. James) that the United States should join Great Britain in protesting against any attempt of any outside power to restore Spain's authority in America. Mr. Adams (Monroe's Secretary of State) did not relish the suggestion but did approve the object. He thought the course too likely to make the United States "a cock-boat in the wake of the British man-of-war" and so draw them again and at a disadvantage in European politics.

The fear that Russia would require of Spain the Spanish Province of California as a reward for assistance in the South had great bearing on the American consideration of this question.

President Monroe accepted Mr. Adams' view of the matter and in his message of December, 1823, told Congress and the world what attitude he meant to take towards any attempt on the part of the European Powers "to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere."

Mr. Canning unable to obtain from the United States all that he had hoped for, refused the invitation extended to Great Britain to join the "Holy Alliance" and thus served notice on the Powers that Great Britain approved of the message. (The Monroe Doctrine) It would appear that Great Britain approved because it served her interests best; however, does not her selfishness become our gain? It would seem that the first suggestion that culminated in the Doctrine came from Great Britain.

Nelson's victories had given Great Britain control of the seas and none of the European Powers desired to challenge that Power backed up by the strength of the United States.

The editor suggested that I referred to the incident of Manila Bay in 1898 when I first stated that Great Britain had supported the Monroe Doctrine. I had never before heard that any one considered that support as pertaining to the Monroe Doctrine but I would like to refer to the action of the Representative of Great Britain in Washington just prior to the declaration of war with Spain. Certain representatives of European Powers called upon the British Representative and proposed that he should join them in advising President McKinley that their Governments looked with disfavor upon war between the United States and Spain; his answer was to the effect that Great Britain approved of our course and the instance at Manila Bay proved the point. Very truly yours,

NATHAN O. NOAH.

Note: Since our correspondent confesses that the task of proving his original statement ("Admitting that in the past the Monroe Doctrine would have been without force without the support of the British Empire, for which we are grateful," etc.,) we see no good reason for prolonging this discussion. The same force that would have defended the Monroe Doctrine against Great Britain would have upheld it against any other challenger. Our reference is to the American Navy.

France And England

In Paris and London there is insistence that the Entente is not disturbed by the divergence of policy toward Russia; that a mere incident like this does not shatter the unity of the Allies. Perhaps this is true, but when the two nations take opposite courses on the most important question of the time one cannot help feeling that diplomatic unity is, for the present at least, somewhat disturbed. That England and France want to work together, realise that they must work together if there is any possible way to do so, is undeniable, but they are not working together just now.

British interest is, or seems to be, in peace and trade. France has a powerful interest in the maintenance of a strong Poland, and another in the payment of the old Russian debt. It may be conjectured that Wrangel's offer to pay the debt was the chief reason for his recognition. As for Poland, France still needs her to offset Germany. England can afford to disregard Germany; the menace to England lies under water off Horn Reef and at Scapa Flow. But France still has to think of Germany, and a disarmed Poland will be a liability rather than an asset in future Franco-German differences.

Which policy is right must be decided after we know the intentions of the Bolsheviki. If they are really going to give reasonable terms to Poland, the British attitude is sensible and the French recognition of Wrangel somewhat too hasty. If the Bolsheviki, as the French believe, are merely killing time with peace talk in hopes of either a complete military conquest of Poland or the forcing of a Soviet Government upon the Poles, then the British policy is futile and the French are wise.

The peace envoys seem to have met at last, after a series of delays and confusions which each side attributed to the treachery of the other, but which seem to have been accidents of transit and communication. Making peace by wireless in Eastern Europe seems to be almost as difficult as making a luncheon engagement by telephone in New York. The report from "semi-official sources" in Moscow that the Bolsheviki demand that the Polish "workers" be armed as a "guarantee of the rights of the proletariat" is ominous. The proletariat, in Bolshevist usage, is the right-thinking proletariat—the Bolshevist proletariat. If this report is authentic, Lenin is virtually demanding the disarming of the Polish Government and the arming of the Polish Bolsheviki. This would be annexing Poland in another form.

We need not assume the worst just yet. When the French urge the Poles to refuse the terms of the Bolsheviki because they endanger Polish independence they fail to consider that the Poles are likely to pay the penalty if they take this advice. If the Russian terms really do destroy Polish independence, the Poles can do nothing but fight to the last, but it is a little early for the French, who are not going to have to do the fighting, to bid the others sell their lives dearly. Meanwhile Mr. Millerand informs the American Government that he is entirely in accord with the principles which it set forth, and British labor gets together in convention for a purpose which the usually tame J. H. Thomas describes as more than a "mere strike."

LINES FROM LETTERS

Dear Bill: I have a barber and often take my face round to him to have it trimmed. I did this a day or so ago. He told me to sit down. "Shave Sir?" he said. I thought of a lot of things to say. I was going to say "No you fool, throat cut" But I saw at once there was no need to give instructions, for he was a man who knew his business. Then he told me that he seemed to remember my face. The man was a marvel for it was covered with soap at the moment. I tried to tell him it was a decent face before the Barbers' Trade Union got on its track. Then he started on politics and the coming presidential election. He wanted to get me mad about politics while I was harmless. I moved one eye to show that I agreed with him. He stuffed the soap into it and closed it. He told me my hair was coming out. I told him I was glad because I hated the beastly stuff. When he had got through with me I thanked him for having left me one ear but the marks that he left on the other parts of my face I shall bear to the grave. Its safety first for me in future Bill.

Yours Alf.

After interviewing a patient in a lunatic asylum, the doctor patted him on the back, and said "Now you are all right again. You can write and tell your friends that you'll be home in a fortnight as well as possible."

The patient went off gladly to write his letter. He had it finished and sealed and was just about to affix the stamp when it slipped through his fingers to the floor, alighted on the back of a cockroach, and stuck there. The patient did not see cockroach. What he did see was his escaped postage stamp zigzagging aimlessly across the floor, up the wall and along the ceiling. He tore up his letter. "A fortnight!" he said, "I shan't be out of here in five years."

Harding Undertakes To Out-Wilson Wilson

By R. H. ROWE
(New York Times)

Candidate Harding, who declares in his acceptance speech that there is "no man big enough to run this great republic" and that "there never has been," nevertheless has marked out for himself an even more superhuman task than that which he conceives the Presidency to be.

Unless Senator Harding is fathering the most stupendous hoax ever attempted on the American people, he must do two things, according to his own professions and promises:

First—He must blot out the existing League of Nations. He must wipe the slate clean of this compact with its "menacing involvement" — this "supreme blunder."

Second—He must write on the slate, thus freshly scoured, "a new world relationship," about which, however, he refuses any details other than it will be the "fraternised conscience of nations"—"an association of nations, co-operating in sublime accord."

By plain inference in his speech Senator Harding asserts that President Wilson is the worst kind of autocrat, and that by using his autocratic powers he forced on the unwilling countries of the world the present League of Nations.

And yet Candidate Harding, who pretends to stand aghast at such an exhibition of dictatorial powers, gives his solemn pledge to the American people to accomplish a task that will necessitate the possession and use of greater dictatorial powers than President Wilson's worst enemies ever accused him of having, or Senator Harding or Senator Lodge ever dreamed could exist at all.

The Treaty of Versailles creates new nations and sets boundaries therefor and provides, in just measure, for each nation injured, reparation for the damage wrought by the Central Powers. The League of Nations guarantees the existence of these new nations and the boundaries thereof and also guarantees the payment of the reparations alloted. The drafting of the treaty and the formation of the League were a mighty task.

But Senator Harding commits himself and the Republican Party to a task myriad times more mighty. He pledges his word to make the nations give up what they already have for something he intends to hand them. He pledges the faith of the Republican Party to make the nations abandon the rights guaranteed them under the League of Nations and enter into "the new relationship" in which nothing more substantial is guaranteed them than "the fraternised conscience of nations, co-operating in sublime accord," which shall be "specifically American."

What, indeed, are the other nations of the world to get out of Mr. Harding's "America first" league that will cause them to waive their boundary and land title rights and reparation allotments under the League of Nations and rush to join Mr. Harding's phantom league?

Can any sane person believe that these nations will drop the substance that they already possess for the shadow reflected by Republican hate for the President? And yet that is the stunt that Candidate Harding, with an easy wave of his hand, sets for himself.

And this is the man who asks the people to make him President, and who approaches the task with such fear and trembling—considering his limitations which he freely admits and from the flourish with which he admits them, seems really proud to be an incompetent. With such trepidation does he view the task that he has announced his intention of calling in the aid of the Republicans in the Senate and the Republicans in the House and finally the Vice President and, by inference, any other Republican, individual or official, who has nothing else to do, to come and help him to be President.

This is the man who shudders to think of facing unaided the duties of the Presidency, but who now unblinkingly proposes to sit on the turtle back of the Republican Party and balance the world on his shoulders and keep it in balance with his "new relationship."

If the Republican Party through Nominee Harding can put over this proposed task not only of killing a League of Nations, that is alive, but of clothing with reality and life a phantom that has never had being, then the Republican Party will be more powerful than the armies of Alexander or the cohorts of Napoleon, and Candidate Harding will perforce become a Colossus, notwithstanding he insists on playing the part of insignificance, and all Democrats and all Republicans who see in the present League of Nations the only hope for a century or more of any real concert of nations to put down war, "will walk under his huge legs and peep about to find themselves dishonorable graves," having died of shame at not putting their trust in Senator Harding and the Republican platform.

I hope the American people will realise that Senator Harding has proposed a program which, if sincere, is the most blatantly egotistical, ignorant and impossible that ever insulted the intelligence of the world, and which, if not sincere, is the most cruel decention ever tried on an enlightened electorate — most cruel in that it attempts to deceive the people of this nation on a proposal that represents the world's noblest aspiration.

The Canal's Best Year

Panama's Receipts Were Two Millions Over Expenses In 1919-1920

(From the Panama Canal Record)

During the fiscal year from July 1, 1919, to June 30, 1920, the volume of traffic passing through the Panama Canal exceeded that in any previous twelve months period. A total of 2,478 commercial ships made the transit, as compared with 2,025 in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, 2,130 in the fiscal year 1918 and 2,134 in the calendar year 1919.

The number of commercial ships passing through the canal in the fiscal year 1920 was about two fifths above the average traffic for the periods of canal operation. It was approximately one-sixth greater than the number of ships in the previous record year (1918) and one fifth greater than the number in the fiscal year 1919.

Of the 2,478 commercial ships making the transit in the past fiscal year 1,180 were bound from the Atlantic to the Pacific and 1,298 from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

The aggregate net tonnage of the commercial ships passing through the canal in the fiscal year 1920 was 8,545,653 tons, according to the Panama Canal rules of measurement. Of this, 4,168,873 tons went from the Atlantic to the Pacific and 4,376,780 tons from the Pacific to the Atlantic. In the fiscal year 1919 the aggregate was 6,131,575 net tons.

The cargo carried through the canal by the commercial ships in the fiscal year 1920 totalled 9,374,499 tons of 2,240 pounds. Of these, 4,092,516 tons were bound from the Atlantic to the Pacific and 5,281,983 tons from the Pacific to the Atlantic. The aggregate cargo in the preceding fiscal year carried by commercial ships was 6,877,649 tons.

In addition to the traffic of commercial ships 266 vessels passed through the canal in the service of the United States Government without the payment of tolls. These were practically all army and navy vessels. They carried a total of 365,898 tons of cargo.

In revenues and in earnings in excess of expenses of operation and maintenance new records were likewise established during the fiscal year. The summation of charges has not been completed in detail, but the figures indicate aggregate revenues approximating $8,800,000 during the year. Expenses of operation and maintenance, including a proportion of overhead, in which are the expenses of civil government, hospitals, quarantine and sanitation, the executive department, the accounting department, the Washington office, the operation and repairs of storehouses and quarters, lighting of streets, operation of water and sewer systems and roads, etc., total about $6,650,000. This indicates an excess of about $2,150,000.

No profit has been made in a commercial sense, since there is no consideration here of interest charges on the investment or of the depreciation of the plant.

The previous record for a year for revenues was made in the fiscal year 1918, in an amount of $6,411,843.28. In that year the excess of revenues over expenses amounted to $491,500.34, being greater than that in any fiscal year prior to the fiscal year 1920.

In the fiscal year 1919 revenues amounted to $6,854,016.98, and the earnings above the cost of maintenance and operation were $241,822.21.

To the beginning of the fiscal year 1920 the excess of expenses over revenues had made a deficit in the account amounting to $4,618,990.75. This deficit will be decreased to about $2,500,000 by the earnings in the fiscal year ending June 30 1920.

Tolls constituted about 96 percent of the revenues. Other items are licenses and taxes, court fees and fines (about $150,000), and profits on the business operations of the canal adjuncts. The latter item amounts to about $200,000 for the fiscal year 1920, and is on operations in which the expenditures were over $14,000,000.

Things To Be Learned About Gravity And Its Opposing Forces From The Whirling Of A Weight Explained In Simple Terms

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS
(Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest)

"If I tie a weight to the end of a string and whirl it in a horisontal circle, as the velocity increases the string becomes almost perpendicular to the axis of rotation. The forces acting on the weight are centrifugal, the reaction centripetal, the propelling force which pulls it around in a circle, and gravity. Of all the forces acting on the weight none of them, or their components, act opposite to gravity, yet why is gravity overcome?—A. C. LeM."

You are mistaken in thinking that no force acts against gravity when the weight is whirled around in a horizontal circle. There is a component directly opposed to gravity. To find it, begin with the weight hanging motionless at the end of the string. Gravity then holds it in a vertical position.

Now, move your hand which holds the other end of the string to one side. If the movement is made very slowly the weight will remain undisturbed in position, except that it will accompany the motion of the hand, and so continue to hang in a vertical line. But make the motion suddenly, in a horizontal plane, and the effect, as you can see by drawing a diagram, is as if the weight had virtually been lifted a little, thus compelling gravity, in order to keep it vertically under the point of suspension, to swing it through an arc of a circle.

WEIGHT ACQUIRES ACTION

The weight thereupon acquires a motion like that of a pendulum. The stronger the disturbing force the higher the weight rises at the turning point of each oscillation. Then, change the to-and-fro motion of the point of suspension to a circular motion, and the pull of your hand upon the weight becomes continuous, the result being that the weight is kept, in opposition to gravity, at a certain height above the level which it occupies when hanging vertical, and is made to revolve at that height in a circle around your hand.

The height depends upon the ratio of the whirling force to gravity. Increase that force as with it, of course, the velocity, and you may be able so far to "overcome" gravity that the horizontal circle in which the weight revolves is nearly on a level with your hand.

The line formed by the stretched string between your hand and weight may be regarded as the diagonal of the combined forces, the vertical component representing the effect of gravity, and the horizontal component the effect of the other force. By changing the velocity of revolution of the weight you proportionally change the relative magnitude and direction of the component forces. Here again a diagram will make the principle easier to grasp. It will be a fine exercise to make such a diagram. I will give you a hint how to do it.

WHERE GRAVITY OPERATES

Draw a semi-circle with the convexity downward, as if to show the path of a swinging pendulum. From the center point draw a vertical radial line. Where this line cuts the curve in the middle is the place where the weight would be if it hung affected by gravity alone.

Now draw two or three other radial lines meeting the curve at different heights, all on the same side of the semi-circle. Each of these lines will stand for the diagonal of the forces at some particular speed at which the weight is whirled. The higher the velocity the higher the position of the diagonal on the diagram, and the nearer its approach to horizontality.

Also, the higher the velocity, the shorter the vertical component. From the outer end of each radial line representing a diagonal, draw a horizontal line to meet the vertical. Then each such horizontal line will represent the centripetal, or horizontal, component of the combined forces, while the length of the vertical radial line included between the center point from which the semi-circle was described and the point of intersection of the horizontal line will denote the gravity component.

The tendency of the whirling weight to rise in opposition to gravity is due to the fact that as long as it revolves in any plane below the plane of the centripetal force (which is determined by the motion of the hand) that force itself must have two components, one horizontal and parallel to the plane of the force, the other vertical and perpendicular to that plane.

OPPOSITION TO GRAVITY

It is this vertical component of the centripetal force that acts in opposition to gravity, and at each level of the plane of revolution, balances the gravitational force. In your diagram you will find that each line representing the gravity component likewise represents its equal, i. e., the corresponding vertical component of the centripetal force.

In connection with this I wish to make a correction. In a recent article by accident I said that the velocity imparted by gravity varies as the square of the time. What I should have said, and intended to say, is that the distance fallen varies as the square of the time. The velocity varies simply as the time. Thus, in one second a falling body acquires a velocity of about 32 feet per second, and in three seconds the velocity becomes 96 feet. But in one second a body falls 16 feet, and in three seconds 144 feet.

Stinging Comments On The Mosquito

BY JAMES J. MONTAGUE
(New York World)

The yellow fever mosquito buries his beak in one of your capillaries, leaves a few germs there, and in a week or two you are out of your misery.

The typhoid mosquito will do the same thing for you, unless you happen to have a strong constitution and can live on a diluted milk diet for two months without going hungry and robbing the icebox.

These mosquitoes bear the same relation to the domestic mosquito that the enthusiast does to the late Mr. Torquemada. And yet there are those who allege that the domestic mosquito is perfectly harmless.

Of course the average commuter will tell you that there are no mosquitoes in his suburb. Pinned down and put on oath he will admit that season before last a few were seen on one of the back streets. While he is telling you this, if you happen to be visiting him, he will probably be nailing screens around his porch. The screens, he will tell you are to keep the flies out. But that doesn't explain why all the beds that are occupied by members of his family are swathed in mosquito nets. Flies apparently all belong to a union whose rules forbid night work in any of its forms. Mosquitoes don't.

Of course mosquitoes are more plentiful in some suburbs than in others. In the State of New Jersey, for example, they frequently stall the local trains, as did the buffaloes of old. A homing business man, if he has to walk any distance between the station and house, is so thoroughly mosquito-plated by the time he reaches his gate as to be unrecognisable save by the dog, who employs his scent as a means of identification.

In Westchester County we have fewer mosquitoes, but they are far more intelligent. One could in fact call them super-mosquitoes without flattering them in the least.

They are not as large as the Cape Cod mosquito, whose bulk approximates that of a small Pekinese dog, nor as ferocious as the California mosquito, which keeps the bobcats and mountain lions masthended above the snow line on the Sierras throughout the summer months.

But they are a living proof of the presence of reasoning power and even genius in the lower animals. And if any animal is lower in the matter of character and criminal tendencies than a Westchester County mosquito, I have not met with him in my very considerable wandering over this continent.

Our house of course is thoroughly screened. We have no pose about mosquitoes. If we had we couldn't keep it ten minutes after a guest arrived.

There are springs on all the screen doors so powerful that they shut like rat-traps when opened, and it requires practice for a human being to get through one of them without injury to his person or clothing.

Each member of the family on reaching the house is isolated in a screened room while his clothing is searched for mosquitoes.

You would think that these precautions would be sufficient. But you would be thinking without adequate knowledge of the craft and determination of the Westchester County mosquito.

I don't know how they get in. I sometimes suspect that they bite through the screens, although entomologists assure me that they have no teeth. It is also possible that they are conducting a hatchery somewhere in the cellar, though we never have found it.

I can testify, however, that they do get in—not in flocks or even gangs, but in sufficient numbers to force the family to sleep watch and watch, or not to sleep at all.

When we retire for the night there are usually six or seven waiting for us, concealed in various inaccessible parts of the room.

They have a patience which equals their cunning. Never by any chance—not even if they are famishing for food—do they betray their presence while the light is on.

But, as soon as it is turned off they descend on us with a chorus of shrill growls. Growls is the word.

It is too late then to do anything but pour ammonia on the wounds and try to hunt them to their lairs.

If they have had time to take long, refreshing draughts of our gore they appear to get tipsy—although for the last six months there has been no apparent reason why our blood should thus affect them.

ATTACK IN WAVES

Then it is comparatively easy to overtake and destroy them. Destroying the first attacking wave, however, is as little use as it was to destroy the advance guard of Germans before Liege.

For every mosquito we kill two avenging mosquitoes rise out of their obscurity, and as soon as the gloom is restored fare forth to the charge.

Off goes the light; out come the mosquitoes, and, chanting their weird battle song, make for any portions of our persons that are not swathed in blankets.

We sleep now with the lights blazing full on, while two of the family sit up with clubs to protect those who slumber.

It breaks into the day, but it is the only method we have devised. The mosquito is a comparatively small creature, and his head is almost miscroscopic. But if the same kind of gray matter filled the craniums of us human beings the forces of nature would long ago have been harnessed, and we would be looking back on the millennium.
